   that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever. Amen. (Revelation 5:12, 13)
George Frederick Handel (1685-1759) was a contemporary of J. S. Bach and of German heritage. However, unlike Bach, Handel’s career led him away from Germany to Italy where he worked among the Italian masters for many years. Influenced greatly by the Italian musical style, Handel composed in many mediums but became famous writing Italian opera which had won the hearts of most of Europe. In 1710, Handel moved to England where he attempted to establish a tradition of Italian opera. However, Handel’s operatic success in England was short-lived as Italian opera was on the decline.

The decline of Italian opera led the practical Handel to venture away from opera into the compositional genre of oratorio. The Harvard Dictionary of Music defines an oratorio as a “composition with a long libretto of religious or contemplative character that is performed in a concert hall or church without scenery and costume.” Handel’s oratorios were partly a practical outcome of the fact that theatrical productions such as opera were forbidden during the Lenten part of the church calendar.

Though, by far, the most famous and most enduring oratorio ever written, Messiah is an anomaly of the oratorio form. Most oratorios tell a story and have identifiable dramatic characters, more like an opera without costumes or staging. In fact, every other Handelian oratorio follows the traditional pattern. Messiah is unique; it has no story line and no identifiable characters.

Messiah was composed in London during the fall of 1741 with feverish speed and intensity in only 24 days. Charles Jennens, the compiler of the biblical libretto, was convinced Messiah was an inferior artistic product because of the brevity of its composition and openly expressed his disapproval. Messiah was first performed in Dublin, Ireland, for charitable purposes under the direction of Handel and was performed for benevolent causes many times under Handel’s direction during his lifetime. That Handel performed this work with different sets of soloists explains the reason there are alternate versions of several of the solos. Handel adjusted for the forces he had on hand for each of his performances.

The libretto of Messiah is made up entirely of direct quotations of Scripture. The references chosen and their order form a biblical apologetic, a presentation of biblical evidence as to the nature of the person and work of Messiah. The librettist, Charles Jennens, did this very skillfully. Indeed, Messiah is a very orthodox expression of biblical Christianity.

The major theme in the libretto is that of Promise and Fulfillment. Old Testament messianic prophecies of ancient origin are shown to find culmination in the person and work of the historical figure of Jesus Christ. Messiah is not a loosely constructed string of unrelated Bible verses; it is a careful proclamation of Jesus of Nazareth as the one whom the prophets of ancient Israel foretold. He is proclaimed to be the Lord and King of the universe and the only Savior of the world. He is Emmanuel - God with us.

Part One concerns the promise and the coming of Messiah. This section focuses on the incarnation; God’s coming into the world as Jesus of Nazareth, to save His people from the darkness of sin.

Part Two begins with the passion of Christ, His suffering and death, which is the full payment for the sins of the world. It then celebrates the resurrection of Christ and His victory over death. Choruses and arias follow which speak of the proclamation of the gospel to the ends of the earth. This section culminates with the “Hallelujah Chorus” which proclaims the Messiah to be the King of Kings and Lord of Lords who will reign forever.

Part Three addresses the benefits of salvation to the believer. Part Three ends in a portrait of heavenly worship. The Sacrificial Lamb who redeemed His people by sacrificing His own life is now exalted, surrounded by choruses of praise. This section concludes with the might Amen fugue.

Tonight’s performance does not include many selections from this work as a complete performance would run nearly three hours. The numbers given in the libretto will inform you as to what was omitted.

We hope you enjoy and take to heart our enthusiastic proclamation of Jesus Christ as King of Kings and Lord of Lords in our performance of Handel’s Messiah.

DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC MISSION STATEMENT

The Music Department seeks to produce transformational leaders in the musical arts who will have profound influence in homes, churches, private studios, educational institutions, and on the concert stage. While developing the God-bestowed musical talents of music majors, minors, and elective students, we seek to provide an integrative understanding of the musical arts from a Christian world and life view in order to equip students to influence the world of ideas. The music major degree program is designed to prepare students for graduate study while equipping them for vocational roles in performance, church music, and education. The Belhaven University Music Department exists to multiply Christian leaders who demonstrate unquestionable excellence in the musical arts and apply timeless truths in every aspect of their artistic discipline.

The Music Department would like to thank our many community partners for their support of Christian Arts Education at Belhaven University through their advertising in “Arts Ablaze 2012-2013.” It is through these and other wonderful relationships in the greater Jackson community that makes many of our concerts possible at Belhaven. We praise God for our friends and are truly thankful for their generosity. Please mention The Arts at Belhaven University when you visit.
