Belhaven College Introduces The Institute for Business Ethics

Jackson, Miss. (Jan. 12, 2005) – The Institute for Business Ethics at Belhaven College will address Mississippi business leaders who recognize that the absence of business ethics has an affect on our economic environment at a conference on Wednesday, January 19, 2005 from 8 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. at the Center for the Arts located at 835 Riverside Dr.

Titled, “How Do Ethics Affect Your Bottom Line? Consideration for CEO’s and Senior Administrators,” the conference will feature three guest speakers as well as interactive breakout sessions.

Featured speakers include, Dr. Richard Chewning, Dr. Lawrence Ruddell and Mr. Randy Russ. Chewning is the author of “Business Ethics in a Changing Culture” and past chairman of the board for Roger Clarke, Incorporated.

Ruddell is the founder and CEO of the Global Institute for Ethical Leadership in Houston, Texas and Russ is the former CEO of Community Coffee.

Established in January 2004, The Institute for Business Ethics examines the current crisis in the economic environment where trust, accountability and integrity are heavily weighed. Through research, seminars and publications, The Institute for Business Ethics will address ethical challenges in the business world and the implications for the wider marketplace.
